1. Introduction

Redress Scotland is an executive non-departmental public body and is responsible for making decisions on completed applications to Scotland's Redress Scheme.

This report, sharing information about the work of Redress Scotland, is part of a regular series and is part of our commitment to sharing information about our work.

In this report, we share information about received and completed applications, types of applications, queue levels within Redress Scotland and how long we take to make decisions, asking applicants for more information and levels of redress awards.

As our work develops, we expect to share more information about what we do and the decisions we have made. We will also continue to protect the confidentiality of individual applicants and their experiences, and we will do this in all our publications.

2. How many applications has Redress Scotland received?

The Scottish Government supports applicants to complete their applications to Scotland's Redress Scheme. Each individual applicant decides when their application is complete and if they are ready to send their application to Redress Scotland.

Scotland's Redress Scheme opened on the 8 December 2021. Up to 31 March 2025, Redress Scotland had received a total of 3,553 applications from the Scottish Government, 3,518 of which were directly related to redress applications. The high levels of monthly volumes of applications received between July and November 2024 (on average about 150 per month) did not continue into the later months of 2024-25 with the average decreasing to around 110 applications per month between December 2024 and March 2025.

In the financial year 2024-25 (from 1 April 2024 to 31 March 2025) Redress Scotland received 1,548 applications, about 20% higher than the number received in 2023-24 (1,292). The higher volumes received since June 2024 have increased the average number of applications received per quarter (three-month period) in 2024-25 to 387 which is higher than the average received in 2023-24 (323).

The following chart shows how many redress applications were received by Redress Scotland for each month since the scheme has been open. In general, the number of applications Redress Scotland have received from the Scottish Government has been increasing since the start of scheme although the level varies, as shown on the chart below. Based on the most recent months, however, there are signs that this may be stabilising somewhere around 110-120 per month on average.

The average number of applications received per month over the last year was 129, with 5 of the last 12 months having amongst the highest levels of received applications seen since the start of the scheme. However, more recent months have not continued this trend and consequently, it is difficult to predict what we will receive in 2025-26.

Upto the end of March 2025, Redress Scotland had received 3,518 redress applications. Volumes received peaked at 193 in July 2024 but more recently have reduced to 110-120 per month.

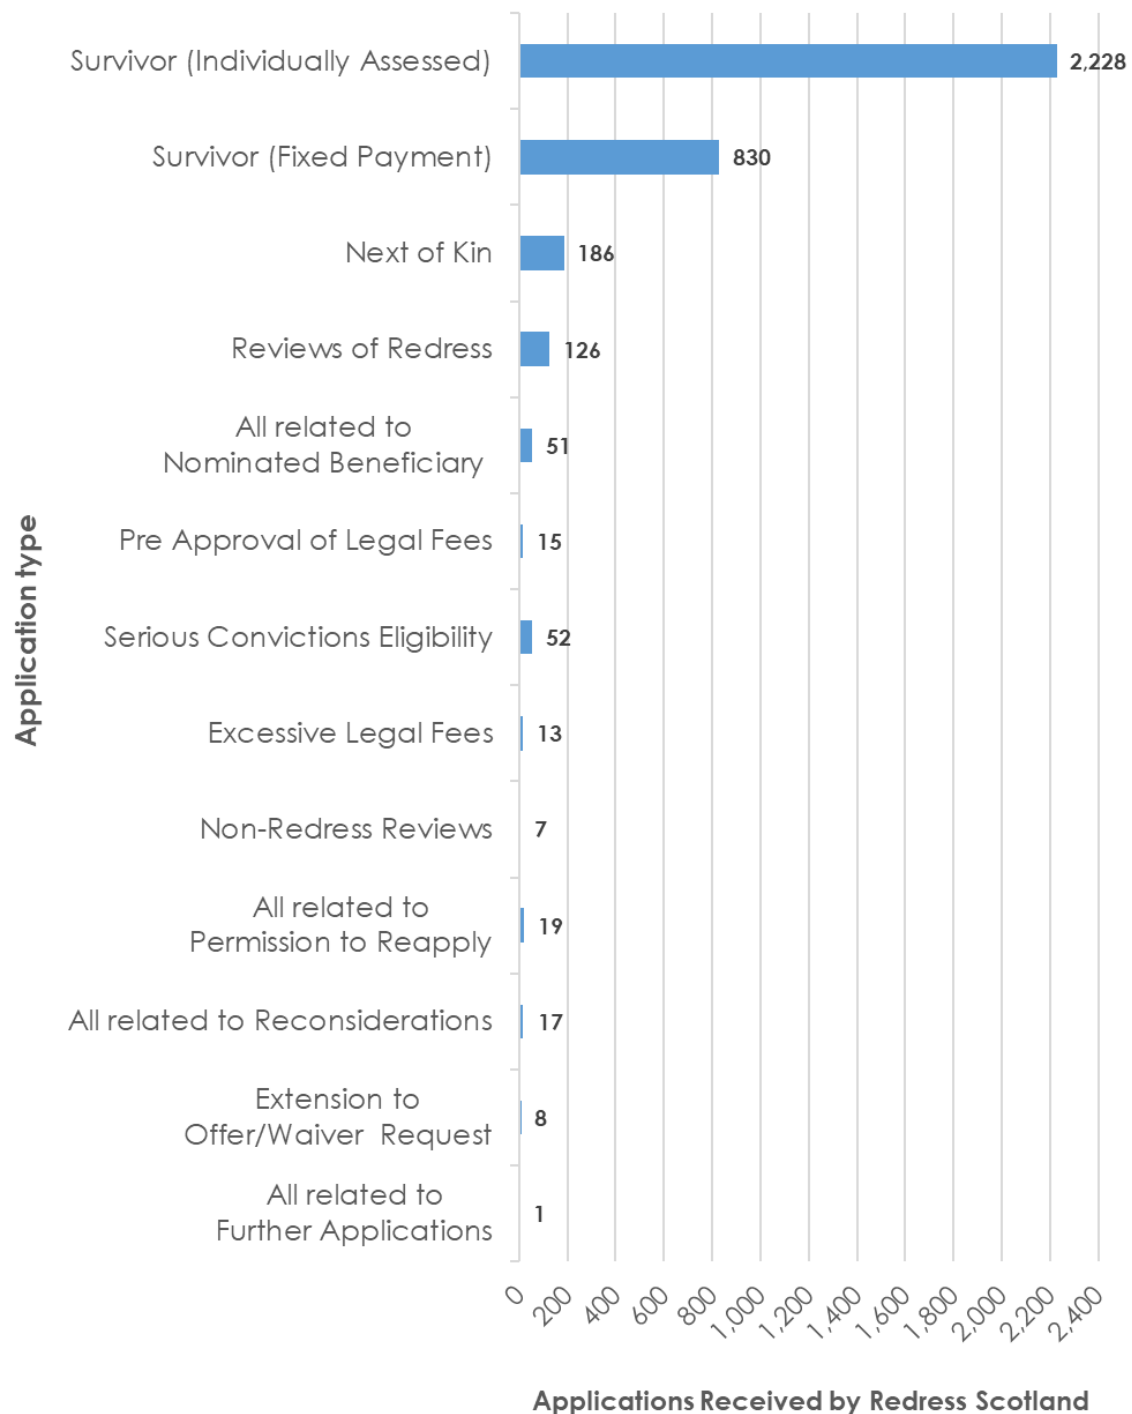

3. What types of applications has Redress Scotland received?

Redress Scotland receives a range of different applications which panels make decisions on. These include:

- fixed redress payments;
- individually assessed payments;
- next of kin payments;
- reviews and reconsiderations of various types of redress applications;
- nominated beneficiary payments;
- other applications related to eligibility for redress;
- requests to extend offer or waiver periods; and
- some aspects of legal fees and expenses.

The following diagram shows how many of each type of application had been received by Redress Scotland from when the scheme opened in December 2021 to the end of March 2025.

Over 60% of all applications received by Redress Scotland up to the end March 2025 were for Individually Assessed applications

4. How many applications has Redress Scotland made decisions on?

Most of the decisions that Redress Scotland has made, are for applications from individuals for redress payments. The following diagram shows the different types of applications Redress Scotland has made decisions on from when the scheme opened in December 2021 to the end of March 2025. During this period, Redress Scotland made decisions on 2,855 applications, 2,808 related to redress and 47 related to Legal Fees and Expenses. The number of decisions made by Redress Scotland in the fourth quarter of financial year 2024-25 was 369, up 41% on the number of decisions made in the first quarter of 2024-25 (262) and over 50% higher than the average number of decisions we made per quarter in 2023-24 (243).

Up to the end of March 2025, Redress Scotland's panels had made decisions on 2,855 applications, just over 60% of which were for Individually Assessed Applications

5. How long does Redress Scotland take to make a decision when they receive a completed application?

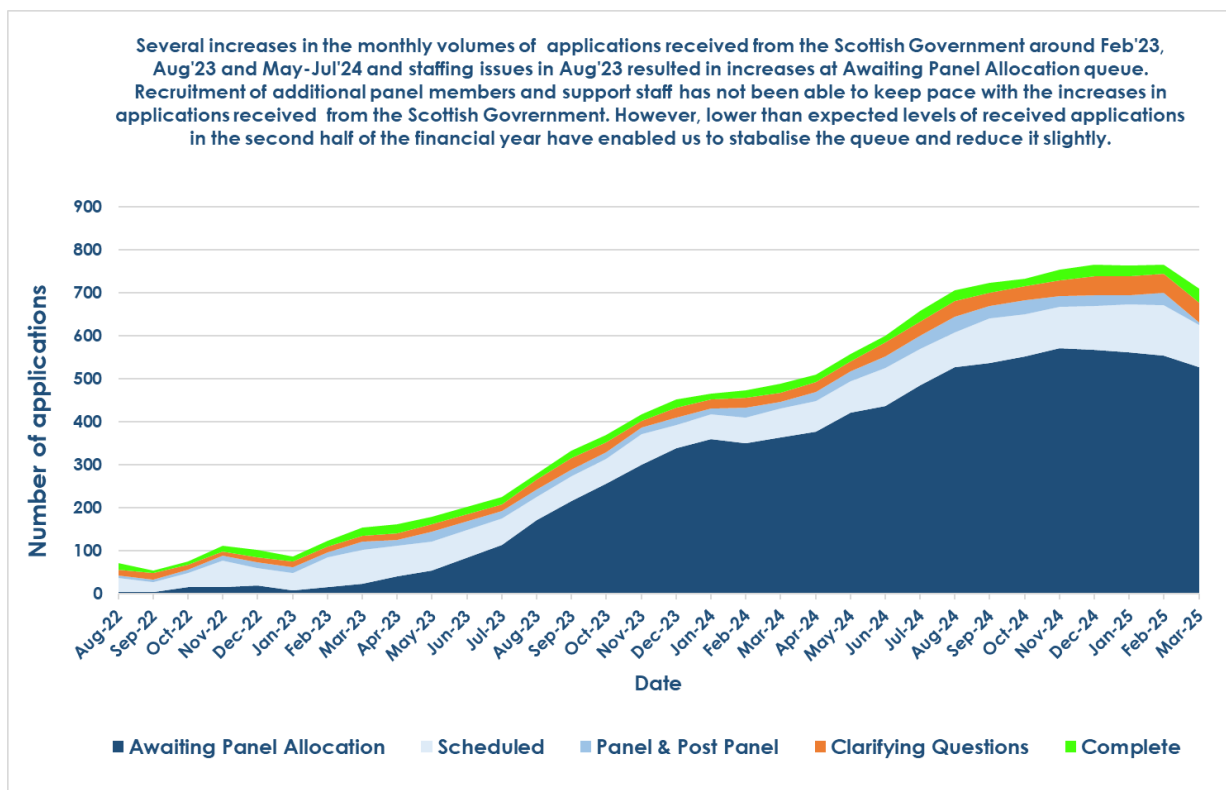

When Redress Scotland receives a completed application the team and panel members carefully follow our process for managing applications. The Redress Scotland team completes initial checks. Each completed application is then allocated to a sitting panel. Each sitting panel has 2 or 3 panel members, depending on the types of applications. Panel members are appointed by Scottish Ministers for their skills and experience and are responsible for making decisions on completed applications.

Each completed application is sent to its allocated sitting panel around 3 weeks before its sitting day. Panel members then review all the information before they meet. When the sitting panel takes place, the Chair makes sure the process of assessing the application and reaching a decision is carefully and thoughtfully managed. Once panel members have made a decision, they also agree and write a decision letter to the applicant. This decision letter is then returned to the Scottish Government, who send it on to the applicant.

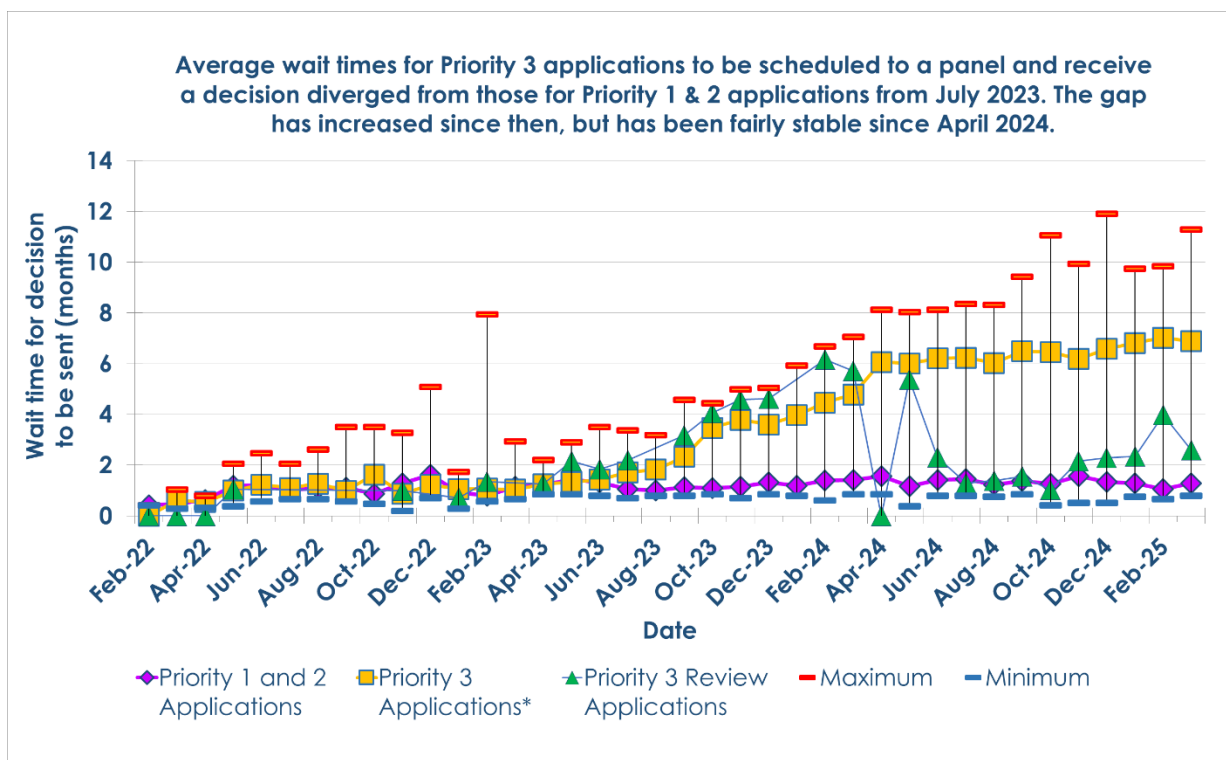

As noted on pages 3 and 4, Redress Scotland had been receiving higher numbers of applications since February 2023. However, since November 2024, the number of applications received has been lower and is a better matched to the capacity of our current panel members and Redress Scotland team. As a result, the queue of applications awaiting scheduling has stabilised. We continue to prioritise applications from those with terminal illnesses (Priority 1) and applicants aged 68 or over (Priority 2), to try to ensure we still process these within our target of 30 working days. In addition, as of 19 April 2024, we increased the priority of any Review of Redress and any Reconsideration applications that were not already either Priority 1 or 2, with the aim of completing these within 45 working days. Since November 2024, we have also been aiming to complete Permission to Re-apply applications within the same timescale. All other first applications are classed as Priority 3.

The chart below shows how the number of applications held by Redress Scotland has increased over time. The number of applications in most stages in Redress Scotland's process have remained stable or increased gradually over time as we have expanded our capacity. The one exception is the queue for Applications Awaiting Scheduling, which increased from levels typically under 20 prior to Apr'23, to around 570 by end Nov'24. This was due to Redress Scotland not having enough panel member and staff capacity to match the increased levels of applications received. The recent lower levels of received applications have enabled us to stabilise the queue and reduce it to just over 500 as of end March 2025. The Scottish Government expect that we will receive applications at a rate of around 140 per month for the first 3 quarters of 2025-26 which should mean that the size of the queue should not increase significantly over this period. Redress Scotland are currently exploring options to try to increase our capacity.

The following chart shows how average wait times have changed for Priority 1 and 2 applications compared to those for Priority 3 and Priority 3 Review applications as received applications volumes have changed over time.

The average wait times¹ for Priority 1 and 2 applications have remained constant through the year. However, from July 2023 on, the average wait times¹ for Priority 3 applications increased to around 6 months and currently appear fairly stable around this wait time. The future trend of these wait times depends on how many applications we receive and how well this matches the resources we have available from both panel members and staff.

The impact of the change for Priority 3 Review and Reconsideration applications was not immediate, as we already had a number of these in the queue when we made this change. However, we have seen the impact of this since July 2024. There has been a similar impact when we included Permission to Re-apply applications within this priority grouping.

The chart also shows the maximum and minimum wait times for applications seen in each month. Those applications with longer wait times are likely to have required further information for panels to reach their decisions.

With wait times for applicants increasing over the past year, we have been focussing on providing the best possible information about how long people will have to wait. We now write to every applicant when we receive their application to confirm that we have received their application and to give them an indicative timescale of how long we think it will take for us to allocate their application to a panel. If circumstances change, we will also contact applicants affected by this change to let them know how this affects their wait time. We also regularly review and update information about this which is available on our website (Timescales at Redress Scotland). Timescales vary according to the type of application.

In addition to these timescales, we also have targets for how long it should take for us to make decisions for each type of application. These targets are intended to stretch and challenge us, and at present we are only meeting them in relation to some types of application (Application priorities update).

¹ These times do not include any time when applications are returned to the Scottish Government for quality related issues or to the applicant for clarifying questions (see section 6).

We have taken steps to improve how long it takes to make decisions on applications, successfully recruiting new panel members in Jan'24. These new panel members completed their training and started making decisions on panels in June 2024 and their impact can be seen in the increase in capacity; we have been consistently making over 110 determinations per month from Sep'24 and as they have gained further experience and as we have made our processes more efficient, we have managed to consistently make over 130 determinations per month since January 2025. However, we do not currently have enough capacity to substantially reduce the queue at Awaiting Allocation. Any significant increase in capacity to allow us to decrease this queue would require an increase in funding for the number of panel members and panel sessions we can hold per month as well as the number of support staff.

Redress Scotland currently has 37 panel members, 5 below our planned resource level. We are in the process of recruiting and training a further group of panel members. The first group of these will start in April 2025 and should complete their training and be ready for panels in July to August 2025. We expect the remaining group of panel members to start later in the financial year. These panel members are to address capacity shortfalls caused by attrition over the last few years and to provide additional flexibility for the organisation. They are not expected to significantly increase the number of decisions Redress Scotland makes over the year.

6. Does Redress Scotland ask for more information from applicants?

When the panel members meet to assess and make a decision on a completed application, they must decide if they have enough information. If the panel members have assessed they do not have enough information, then they may ask for more. If the applicant's caseworker does not already have the information, the panel members write a letter to the applicant to ask for more information, which is then sent to the Scottish Government.

From when the scheme opened to the end of March 2025, Redress Scotland's panel members have asked 349 redress applicants for more information¹ (with under a tenth of these (26) having been asked for more information on more than one occasion). Overall, panels have asked for more information in just under 376 occasions, which is equivalent to just over 13% of redress applications completed up to the end of March 2025².

For financial year 2024-25, panel members have asked for more information in just over 13% of all panel decisions (174 times over the year)² higher than the proportion of around 10% seen in 2023-24 (101 times over the year)².

An applicant can decide how long they need to answer a letter asking for more information. The average length of time applicants took to respond was around 25 working days (for responses received during the period from when the scheme opened to the end of March 2025).

¹ As this analysis solely looks at the number of applicants that have been asked for more information, it is not affected by the number of times applicants may have been asked for more information for the same application.

² Requests for more information have been asked on more than one occasion for some applications.

7. What levels of redress awards have been made?

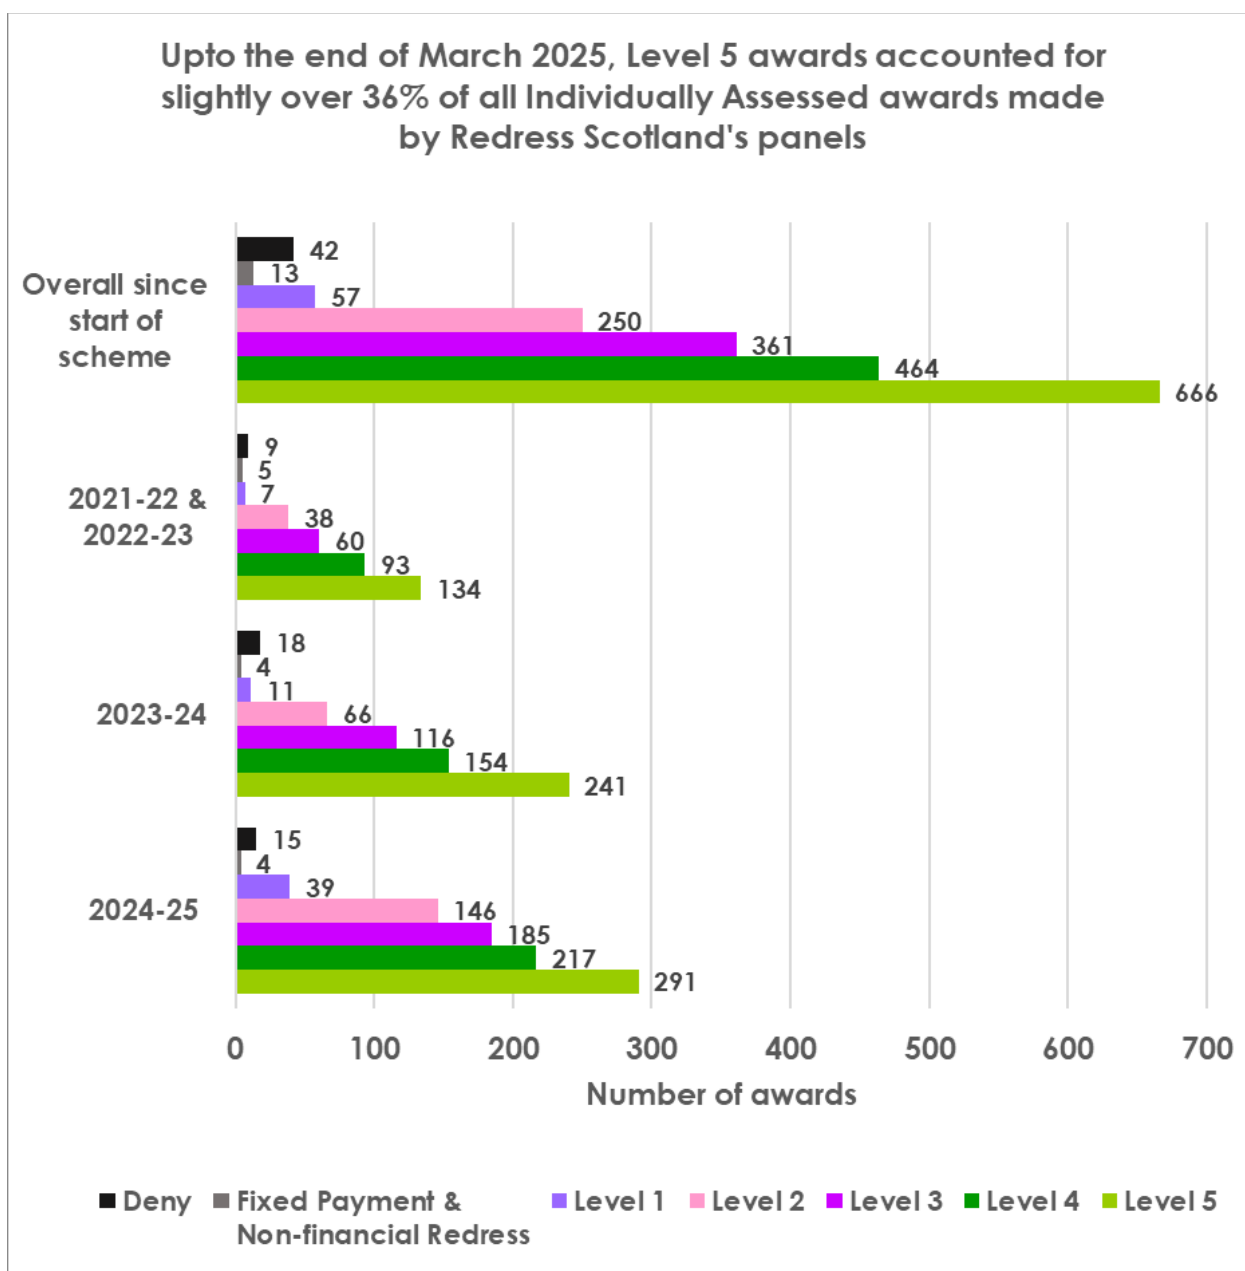

Applications for individually assessed redress awards have five different levels as well as the Fixed Payment level.

Award level	Number
Fixed Payment	£10,000
Level 1	£20,000
Level 2	£40,000
Level 3	£60,000
Level 4	£80,000
Level 5	£100,000

Redress Scotland panel members use the assessment framework, which is part of the statutory guidance for the scheme, to decide what is the most appropriate level for an individually assessed application. Since the scheme opened, redress awards have been made for every level. In total, 1,811 awards have been made for Individually Assessed applications while 42 have resulted in decisions to deny redress. The following diagram shows how many Individually Assessed awards have been made at each level, from when the scheme opened to the end of March 2025 for each financial year since the scheme opened¹.

It appears that, in financial year 2024-25, the proportion of Level 5 awards has decreased compared to previous years (from around 40% of all Individually Assessed awards to around 35%) while the proportion of Level 2 awards has increased (from slightly over 10% to around 15%). It is too early to be able to say if this is a developing trend or just a result of a particular set of applications that have been determined during this year.

¹ Data for Financial Year 2022-23 contain the small number of outcomes from decisions made from when the scheme opened in December 2021 to end March 2022.

Notes:

1. This figure includes Fixed Payments awarded to applicants of Individually Assessed Payment applications. Panels award these when they have determined that the application does not meet the evidential requirements for an Individually Assessed award but does qualify for a Fixed Payment award.
2. The total Individually Assessed determinations shown include 88 Reviews of Redress, 13 Nominated Beneficiary applications and 11 Reconsiderations.

In addition to the Individually Assessed awards, there have been 894 fixed level awards made to applicants for Fixed Payments, Next of Kin, and some Reviews of Redress applications.

8. What information will Redress Scotland share in future?

Redress Scotland is continuously working to build the trust and confidence of survivors. We believe that it is important to share information so that all survivors can find out about what we are doing and how well we are doing it. We also welcome feedback and suggestions. If you have views on what information we should share, please get in touch by emailing us enquiries@redress.scot

9. Revisions History

We strive to make our reporting as accurate as possible, however, errors do occasionally happen. When we find these or users highlight any to us, we will revise our reports as soon as possible and include a summary of what has changed in the table below.
